

If these mergers go through, only two companies will control 90 percent of the consumer market. In a world of increased competition, consumers could be enjoying unlimited local and long-distance telephone calls, as well as high-speed Internet access, for just $40 -- $15 for community Internet and $25 for unlimited phone calls over the Internet. But today, this costs about $90 more than double the price! The FCC should block these mergers and find new ways to bring down the costs of these services, particularly high-speed Internet.
